Stolen Goods Cache Found in Apartment

An arrest which resulted in the detection of a burglar ring and the discovery of a cache of stolen goods valued at about $50,000 was made Saturday evening by Atherton police. Acting upon a tip from San Francisco that burglars might be operating along the peninsula that night, the sheriff's office sent warning to all peninsula police departments to be on the watch for suspicious characters.

Acting upon this advice officers Cellars and Feliz of the Atherton police noticed a car in front of the home of C. A. Jouve in Atherton and inquired of the man at the wheel what he was doing there. The man replied that he was waiting for his partner. Cellars noticed several well-filled bags in the car, and asked what they contained. The man replied that it was laundry. When the police officers opened one of the bags, however, it was found to contain silverware. By this time Officer Woods of the Atherton department had arrived upon the scene and the man in the car, who gave his name as Joe Aquino, 28, was placed under arrest and booked at the jail here on a charge of burglary.

While the officers were arresting Aquino, another of the gang who was ransacking the Jouve home saw the fate of his partner, and leaving the loot which he was preparing to take, escaped.

When Jouve returned shortly after the affair at his home, finding the house in disorder, he phoned to Constable Grill, who immediately came to the office of Sheriff McGrath. Edward Farrell and Tom Maloney were in charge of the jail at the time, and acting upon clews obtained when Aquino was booked at the jail, the three men went to San Francisco to seek an address found on the arrested man.

When the two deputy sheriffs and Constable Grill arrived at the address they found a man who gave his name as Salvado Silverstrucci, asleep in the apartment. He was placed under arrest and a search made of the premises.

The apartment was elegantly furnished with materials which have since proved to have been stolen from peninsula homes. But it was not till the officers had broken through a locked door that the full significance of the arrest broke upon the officers.

In the locked room was found furnishings of every sort, clothing, rugs, radio sets, suit cases---in fact the entire loot from a long series of robberies which had been committed by the pair in homes along the peninsula and as far south as Hollister.

Silverstrucci was brought to the jail here by the two deputy sheriffs, and Constable Grill remained to pack the goods into a moving van in which it was brought to the jail here, where it is being held for identification. Much of it has already been identified by owners.

The two men were arraigned before Justice of the Peace Edward McAuliffe on two charges of burglary, and are being held for lack of $5,000 cash bail on each charge. They will be given a hearing tomorrow.

REDWOOD "BOBBIES" TO BE UNIFORMED

The "force" will soon be resplendent on the streets of Redwood in blue (or it may be olive drab) uniforms and brass buttons. The uniforming of the local officers was decided upon by the city council at its meeting Monday evening. No color for the uniform has been decided upon, but Chief of Police Collins was instructed to obtain samples of different colors suitable for uniforms and a decision will be made at the next meeting of the board.

County Tax Collector Largest Tax Receipts In History of County

County Tax Collector A. McSweeney reports the final settlement of taxes, first installment for the fiscal year 1927, showing a collection of $1,397,631.47. The total charge against the County Tax Colector for the fiscal year was $2,341,763.10. This being the largest amount ever charged in the history of San Mateo County for collection. exceeding all other previous charges by the sum of $118,115.29.

The collection of close to 70% of the total charge on the first installment shows a healthy and prosperous condition of the finances of the county.

The second installment of taxes is now due and payable, but will not be delinquent until the last Monday in April, this year.

FORMER LOCAL PRIEST BURIED IN SAN FRANCISCO

A large number of the former parishioners of the late Father D. O'Sullivan, who passed away in San Francisco last Saturday, attended the funeral of the beloved priest who was pastor of Mount Carmel church here from 1887 to 1895.

For the past thirty years Father O'Sullivan had been the pastor of All Hollows church in San Francisco. During his pastorate here he built the parochial residence. Father O'Sullivan was the first resident pastor of Mount Carmel.

He was devoted to his sacred calling and was universally liked and loved by all who knew him.

Father Guerin, who celebrated the requiem mass, was a first cousin of the deceased. Bishop Keane of Sacramento, was his cousin, also.

FRIENDS ATTEND FUNERAL OF BELOVED LOCAL WOMAN

The chapel of the James Crowe Co. on Webster street was filled with sorrowing friends of Mrs. E. B. Fox on Monday when funeral services were held for that well beloved woman. Services were conducted by Rev. R. J. Currie. Members of the Order of the Eastern Star and of the Rebekahs were present. Vocal solos were sung by O. M. Carrington. The services at the chapel were followed by interment in Union cemetery.

Mrs. Fox passed away suddenly at her home on Arguello street Saturday, following an attack of paralysis a few hours earlier. She had not been in robust health for some months, but her sudden edath was a severe shock to her family and her many friends.

Tomorrow afternoon ,the Ladies' Circle of the Congregational church will hold a food sale at the store on Main street formerly occupied by the Glennan Harness Shop.

Intoxicated Motorists Show Poor Judgment

It is poor judgment to drive while intoxicated, but it is the acme of indiscretion while driving when drunk to choose the mayor's lawn for a roadway or to crash fences belonging to an uncle of a local traffic cop. These facts are now perfectly clear to John C. O'Neil and Ted Niemiers of San Francisco.

O'Neil and Niemiers, with two women were piloting a course along Hopkins avene Tuesday evening when they suddenly found the roadway too narrow for their use. They then turned off onto the lawn of Mayor Beeger on the corner of Hopkins and Duane street. Tiring of their course through the grass and shrubbery of the mayor's front yard, the party steered a course into the yard of Louis Otzen, across the street and finally decided to stop after crashing an ornamental fence in the Otzen yard.

The party failed to stop to thank the local citizens for the use of their yards, but headed for the highway. They stopped at the Sequoia garage, and the proprietor of that institution called Officer Thorpe of the Redwood City police force, a nephew of Otzen, and officer Douglass. The two officers booked the party at the jail.

The two women were sent back to San Francisco. O'Neil faces a charge of driving while drunk and Neimeirs one of intoxication.

"THE PATSY" WILL BE WELL PRESENTED

Sequoia Auditorium, February 18, To Be Scene of Comedy Act

Taking part in a pay is nothing new to those comprising the cast of "The Patsy," the alumni pay to be given in the Sequoia auditorium February 18. All are experienced having taken part in school productions.

On looking up the dramatic career of each member of the cast, it was found that each played an important role in seven high school productions.

Marie Haurat and George Cleese, who have the leads in 'The Patsy' also had the leads in "Cherry Blossoms," an operetta of Mr. Carrington's. In this same operetta Sevigne Roussel, Desire Heydenfeldt, Gilbert Findlay and Gladys Palmer also had prominent roles.

As an opening program of the high school auditorium in 1924, the cast of "The Trysting Place" included George Cleese. The senior play in 1924, Marie Haurat as "Muriel" in "The Charm School" won the hearts of the audience.

Gladys Palmer, the mother in "The Patsy," played the "vamp" in the "Pot Boiler." Al Davies as the father in the alumni play, has taken a variety of parts, among them, the negro in "Seventeen," an alumni play given in 1925; and as the Chinaman in "Once in a Blue Moon;" and he played in "She Stoops to Conquer."

Lucien O'Connell played in "The Isle of Chance" in 1915 and in "A Mid-Summer Night's Dream," given in 1916.

As the Father of Penrod in 'Penrod" Ernest Werder was very successful. He will take the part of the taxi owner and driver in "The Patsy." In the operetta "Daughters of Mohammed," it will be remembered that Princess Zayda was Desiree Heydenfeldt. Miss Heydenfeldt can also add to her list of dramatic successes, the feminine lead in "Penrod.'

It will also be remembered that the lead in "Come out of the Kitchen" was taken by Sevigne Roussel, also in the alumni's play. Gilbert Findlay played in "Seven Keys to Baldpate."

A splendid play is promised by the alumni.

Last Saturday noon, at a quiet wedding at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Hedge on Arlington road, Mrs. Juliette C. Hartsmansheun became the bride of Oscar A. Comper of San Francisco. Rev. C. E. Winning of the Methodist church officiated. Following a wedding breakfast, the newlyweds left for a short honeymoon to be spent in northern California. Upon their return, they will live in San Francisco for a time, later making their home in Palo Alto, where Mr. Comper will open a drug store. Mrs. Comper is a sister of Mrs. Hedge and spent most of her girlhood in Redwood City, where she has a large circle of friends to wish her happiness.

Mrs. Comper is well known in Redwood City and San Francisco, being prominent in lodge and club circles. He is a past president of Redwood Parlor Native Sons. He was formerly associated with a local drug store, and now has a drug store in San Francisco and one in Los Gatos and will soon open a third store in Palo Alto.

Jerome F. MacDonald, a graduate of Sequoia Union High School, and a student at Hastings Law Colloge of San Francisco, has received the award of a complete set of Cycloedia of Law and Procedure and Corpus Juris, for his excellence in research work. There are 62 volumes, valued at $450. MacDonald is also a graduate of San Mateo Junior College.

Vote Shows Confidence In School District and Management

The proposition of issuing bonds to the amount of $250,000 for the enargement of the present plant of the Sequoia Union High School was given a big majority at the election held on Tuesday. The bond issue receives 1,127 affirmative votes, while only 353 votes were cast against it---a good margin over the necessary two-thirds majority necessary for a bond issue.

Another proposition on the same ballot, that of issuing $50,000 bonds for the purchase of another site somewhere in the vicinity of Menlo Park for use as a future high school when the enrollment of the district made a branch of the high school necessary, failed by a narrow margin. This proposition received 950 favorable votes and 353 negative. It was short 57 of the required two-thirds.

The proposal which received approval of the citizens of the district will make possible the erection of a new wing to the school and other necessary improvements.

The high school here has experienced a phenominal growth during the past five years. It was built to accommodate 600 pupils in 1922. Now it has an enrollment of over 800. An enrollment of 1500 in forcast within the next five or six years. The enlargement which is to be made will take care of this increase.

The maximum enrollment of a high school to function properly and efficiently has been estimated at 1500. When the school here exceeds that number a brancn high school will become necessary. It was to provide for this contingency that the other proposition was on the ballot. It was thought wise to secure a tract of land for this use now while land is comparatively cheap ,and can still be secured in large tracts. This was to have bee near some other popuation center, preferably between Menlo Park and Ravenswood.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

California peace officers during 1927 called upon Governor Young to extradite 185 fugitives from other states, the Governor announced last week. At the same time the chief executive was asked to order 207 fugitives returned to other states, but of these requests only 173 were granted. Los Angeles with eighty extradition requests and San Francisco with twenty-four lead all the counties of the state in seeking fugitives in other districts.

Based on the returns from the three-cent gasoline tax the last quarter of 1927, the State Board of Equalization estimates that California's road income from this source for 1928 will amount to $32,000,000, of which approximately $10,600,000 will go for new construction on state highways and $21,400,000 will be used for maintenance and repairs of existing state and county roads. A statement to this effect was issued by the board at Sacramento last week.

California's consolation prize for mineral production in 1926 has been awarded to Sutter county. First prize goes to Los Angeles because of its many flowing oil wells which helped build up a total mineral production figure of $194,358,926. The State's total was $450,330,856. Alpine and Kings counties kept company pretty much with Sutter in the smallness of mineral production totals, for, while Sutter's was $450 and Kings $720.

The division of motor vehicles a few days ago estimated that approximately 135,000 persons were fined, jailed or otherwise punished in California during 1927, for violations of the motor vehicle act. Actual abstracts of violations forwarded to the division by the various courts of the state, in compliance with the law, number 85,145. Division officials estimated there were at least 50,000 more violations of which the state has no record, due to the failure of judges to report.

A survey of the operations of the State Veterans' Welfare Board to determine whether real estate men have been discriminated against in the purchase of homes and farms for California former service men, is being made by a committee of the Sacramento Real Estate Board, it became known last week. F. E. Michel, president of the Sacramento board, announced that a special committee is now studying the workings of the State agency and is expected to present a report in the near future. And this news was met by a statement from George M. Stout, secretary of the Veteran's Welfare Board, to the effect that the State is buying homes to aid the former service men of California and not the real essate men.

California county probation officers have been requested to co-operate with Mrs. Anna L. Saylor, state director of social welfare, in an attempt to standardize probation work. Recently Mrs. Saylor held a conference at Sacramento with leading probation officers of the North, and a similar meeting with officers of southern counties soon will be held in Los Angeles. Mrs. Saylor declared that the probation officers generally favor a standardized system for all the counties and are anxious to assist in the formation of a program that would work to the benefit of the officers.

State Forester M. B. Pratt a few days ago announced that 25,000 2-year-old seedlings of assorted species have been given to the state board of forestry by the Eddy Tree Breeding Station of Placerville for experimental purposes. All but 9,800 of the seedlings are to be assigned to interested individuals in various localities of the state to determine the proclivities of the trees in various climates. The remainder will be placed in the state nursery at Davis. Most of the trees consist of western yellow pine, Rocky Mountain yellow pine, Douglas fir and redwood But there also are some unpine, eastern white pine and Japanese larch.

Stockton's $6,000,000 deeper-water project, the construction stage of which will begin this year, will provide California with the finest and safest inland waterway for ocean-going ships in the United States, and be of great aid to inland development, according to information given Stockton Chamber of Commerce committees and civic bodies by City Manager Charles E. Ashburner. During the first year's work on the project, a total of $1,239,000 will be expended jointly by the Federal government, the State of California and the city of Stockton. The government appropriation calls for $420,000, while the city will spend $400,000. The remainder will be supplied from the $419,000 rights-of-way appropriation of the State of California.

California has risen from thirty-second to twenty-first place in voting percentage of its registration since 1924, the California Development Association reported at a meeting of regional vice-presidents at San Francisco. The report was submitted with a resolution to continue the plan inaugurated in that year of rewarding the community showing the greatest strength at the polls each year in proportion to its registration. The work is carried on through the better citizenship committee which, this year, will have Attorney Albert A. Rosenshine of San Francisco at its head.

The revenues of the California State government from all sources will total $210,825,197 for the present biennium ending June 30, 1929, it was stated as "a minimum estimate" last week by State Controller Ray L. Riley. The State gross receipts tax on public utility corporations, as figured by the State Board of Equalization, will bring in $81,865,000. Under the classification of "other sources," with the gasoline tax, revenues from building and loan socities, general franchise taxes and inheritances, among the various items, Controller Riley predicts an additional $82,965,000 in State income.

A. P. Giannini was warmly commended at the Governor's cabinet meeting last week, held in Sacramento, for his gift to the University of California for establishment of an agricultural economics foundation. Coming from one of the country's leading financiers," declared State Agricultural Director George H. Hecke, "no better illustration is needed to indicate that finance in general, and Mr. Giannini in particular, are sympathetically desirous of helping agriculture."

Creation of a State mineral advisory board, modeled somewhat after the fashion of the highway commisson, to represent the mining industry in State affairs and assist generally in stimulation of the industry, is advocated by Fred G. Stevenot, State director of natural resources. The proposal has been presented to Governor C. C. Young by Stevenot, whose department includes the State Division of Mines and Mining.

Further re-organization of the State Department of Education, establishing a director of education with authority to deputize a qualified educator for administration of the State Teachers' Colleges and special schools, was advocated last week by William John Cooper, State Superintendent of Public Instructions. In the dual capacity of State superintendent and educational director, Cooper has been obliged to handle all educational affairs.

Announcement that a comprehensive state engineering survey is being made of all contemplated grade preparations and highway bridges, with a view to construction operations, was made last week by Bert B. Meek, State Director of Public Works. Consultations are planned with the officials of interested railroad companies, Meek said, in an effort to determine policies affecting participation in grade separation costs.

The State forest tree plantations, organized in connection with the program for the reforesting of cut over timber lands in California, now amount to 53,377 acres, according to a report filed recently with Fred G. Stevenot, director of the State department of natural resources, by State Forester M. B. Pratt. This is but the nucleus of a great system of such plantations, the report declared.

Stockton was the unanimous choice last week of the committee as the 1928 convention city of the United Portuguese Lodge of California. Frank Roderick of Oakland, supreme president of the order, said that plans were being made to entertain 4,000 delegates during the convention, October 7 to 13, inclusive. The order has 50,000 members in the state.

A building report for 1927, issued by S. W. Straus & Company, shows that California is still firmly anchored in third position among her sister states for the volume of new construction undertaken during the year. The golden state, with a total valuation of $327,207,643 for 1927, was surpassed only by New York and Illinois and held a substantial majority over her nearest rival, which was Michigan. Los Angeles was the fourth heaviest building city in the nation and San Francisco ranked ninth.

A $4,000,000 steam generating plant of 53,000 kilowatt capacity will be built on a forty-acre site in India Basin by the Great Western Power Company, it was announced last week by A. Emory Wishon, general manager. The new plant will be the first unit of a development to provide hundreds of thousands of horse power to the bay district and the twenty-six Central California counties reached by the interconnected systems of the Great Western Power Company, the San Joaquin Light and Power Company and the Midland Counties.

C. H. Purchell, district engineer of the United States Bureau of Public Roads, with headquarters in Portland, last week was appointed State highway engineer, the most important State position remaining in the gift of Governor C. C. Young. This announcement by Bert B. Meek, director of the State Department of Public Works, means that ousting of Robert M. Morton, State highway engineer of the Richardson administration. As highway engineer, Purchell will have direct charge of the task of mapping $47,000,000 worth of State highway new construction and maintenance work to be carried on in California during the present biennium.

Rich ore has been found in the Tuolumne mine near Soulsbyville, a mine which has been idle for sixty years, according to word reaching mining men at Stockton. Ore assaying from $30 to $70 a ton has been discovered. The mine is to be developed through a new shaft to be sunk 200 feet north of the old and original workings by Morgan Bergreen of Los Anglese and John B. Sivori of Cherokee, who have leased the property from Benjamin Soulsby of Soulsbyville. In the late fifties the vein was worked to a depth of forty feet, but was abandoned due to hardness of rock and the urge of a gold discovery elsewhere.

Found in a mine shaft 125 feet underground, a fossilized bone, discovered recently by R. E. Blum of Pentz, Butte county, is the shoulder blade of an extinct camel, probably of the Miocene or Pliocene ages. This is the declaration of W. D. Mathews of the department of paleontology of the University of California to whom the bone was sent. Blum was at work mining in the tunnel when he made the discovery. Since then he has found what he believes to be other bones of the animal. The bones were found near an old creek bed at the end of an 800-foot tunnel.

Work on a transbay bridge, connecting San Mateo with Hayward, was begun last week. The bridge will be seven miles in length and will be owned by the San Francisco Bay Toll Bridge Company. The bridge is being built under a fifty-year franchise granted by the San Mateo county Board of Supervisors and approved by the War Department. It will be constructed of reinforced concrete and will have three nine-foot traffic lanes and a lift in the span in the center to provide clearance for large vessels. The bridge will be completed by June, 1929, according to present estimates.

Largest Optical Glass Disk Ever Made in America

For the first time in America and the third time in history, a disk of optical glass 70 inches in diameter, 11 inches thick and weighing 3,500 pounds was successfully molded into one perfect piece. This mammoth disk is to be made into a reflecting mirror for a new telescope at the Perkins university, Delaware, Ohio. The work was done at the bureau of standards in Washington, and officials are seen above watching the disk as it cooled off.

The BABY

Why do so many, many babies of today escape all the little fretful spells and infantile ailments that used to worry mothers through the day, and keep them up half the night?

If you don't know the answer, you haven't discovered pure, harmless Castoria. It is sweet to the taste, and sweet in the little stomach. And its gentle influence seems felt all through the tiny system. Not even a distasteful dose of castor oil does so much good.

Fletcher's Castoria is purely vegetable, so you may give it freely, at first sign of colic; or constipation; or diarrhea. Or those many times when you just don't know what is the matter. For real sickness, call the doctor, always. At other times, a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria.

The doctor often tells you to do just that; and always says Fletcher's. Other preparations may be just as pure, just as free from dangerous drugs, but why experiment? Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold!

The Public Confidence

THE voters of the Sequoia Union High School district have confidence in the school, in the district, in the board of trustees and in the principal of the school. This was well shown Tuesday when a large bond issue was cheerfully voted by a large majority of the voters.

The election was more than a bond election, it was a vote of confidence in the school and its management.

Efforts were made to defeat the issue, not because of any good argument against the enlargement and improvement of the school, but for reasons which the opponents themselves must consider personal and aside from the issue involved. It was most unfortunate and short sighted that in their efforts to defeat the issue some of the opponents should insinuate that by the passage of the bonds this district would be in a similar situation as that faced now by the San Mateo-Burlingame district.

This is a type of argument without any basis of reason. The Sequoia district is not faced with bankruptcy or anything like it, and so long as the affairs of the district are managed by the present board of trustees or men of like calibre such a situation need never be feared. There is not a sounder political division in the state today than the Sequoia Union High School district, nor a more efficient group of officers than its board of trustees. Arguments of the sort mentioned failed to deter the citizens of the district from showing their confidence in the district and the board, but such arguments do the district no good.

Instead of intimating that such a condition as that faced in San Mateo and Burlingame is likely to occur here, we should co-operate with the school officials in every way. Vote such bond issues as are necessary to properly maintain the school, take a pride in having in this district one of the finest high schools on the Pacific Coast; assist the men upon whom the administration of the school falls. In these ways we will make this district doubly secure from the sad fate of the unfortunate district to the north.

Senator Reed for Enforcement

SENATOR DAVID REED of Pennsylvania is a staunch advocate of strict immigration enforcement. Speaking before the Key Men of America Reed stated that more than 1,500,000 applicants for admission to this country had registered at European consulates.

Admission of this number and the millions which would follow would cause the United States "soon to lose its American identity and become a polyglot of transported European culture and institutions," he declared.

He urged that to avoid this menace to the welfare of the country a strict enforcement of the immigration restriction laws and adherence to the national origins system of immigration apportionment should be maintained. "We have no need for and such immigration," the senator continued. "America is doing its own work well today. Can you inflict any greater injury upon the American who works with his hands than to introduce the competition of 1,500,000 new workers who come to look for jobs and come inevitably to take jobs from American citizens?"

Local Y Boys to Join In Club Demonstration

Tomorrow evening many of the boys from the various Y. M. C. A. Clubs will be in attendance at the Roosevelt school in Burlingame at which time there will be a demonstration of the work of various types of clubs. The "Sequoia Friendly Indians" will represent the younger boys groups, the "Marshall Pioneers" of Millbrae will represent the 12 to 15 year old group, and the "Antelope Comrades" of Millbrae the 15 to 18 year old group. These groups have been picked a) those which excell in the presentation of the ritual.

The "Cardinal Comrades" of San Mateo will present a clown stunt. They will represent the county in this event in competition for a place on the "Y Boys' Nite program which will be put on at the Civic auditorium in San Francisco. A representative from each of the Friendly Indian tribes will compete for the county championship in an oratorical contest. "My Favorite Boy Story from the Bible." Five boys from the Redwood City District will be given awards and recognition for the completion of the work under the Friendly Indian program. All parents are invited. The time set to start is 7:30 p. m.

State's Butter Production Large For Year 1927

(By Capitol News Bureau)

SACRAMENTO, February 8 — "Big butter and egg men" are rejoicing today over what their bovine queens brought home during the past year.

Bossy's pay check amounted to about $130,000,000 for 1927, according to Sam H. Greene, secretary of the California Dairy Council.

The higher price of butterfat was largely nullified by the increased cost of living reported for the 590,000 dairy cows, Grenne reported. The price averaged 2 cents higher than for 1926.

State Should Aid Irrigation Projects

Coordinated Plan of Water Development Proposed for State

By ESTO BROUGHTON

SACRAMENTO, February 8 — Characterizing the San Joaquin Valley as the "promised land," the land which has been promised adequate water for many years, L. L. Dennett of Modesto, noted irrigation attorney and former state senator representing Stanislaus, Merced and Madera counties, declared today that irrigation development must be placed under a coordinated plan with federal and state aid if the maximum acreage of 8,400,000 acres in the floor of the valley and marginal foothills is to fruit and flower as it should.

"Irrigation districts have been remarkably successful in a limited area," Dennett admitted. "But the future development which will require the diverting of water on a large scale from a long distance, probably from the Sacramento Valley, cannot be handled by isolated projects financed by the farmers.

"The San Joaquin Valley has a right to demand financial help from the State of California and the federal government," the Stanislaus irrigationist claimed. "Not a cent has ever been spent there by the state while $3,000,000 has been appropriated for flood cotnrol in the Sacramento valley and a like sum for flood control in Los Angeles county.

"It is but fair and right that the area composing one-third of all the agricultural land in the state should receive more consideration at the hands of the state and nation," Dennett asserted, "and it is time that the farmers of the valley rose up in their wrath and demanded it."

"There is no more reason for the Sacramento valley receiving federal suport for the construction of the Kennett dam which will store 4,000,000 acre feet on the upper Sacramento river under the Bailey plan," Dennett insisted, "than there is for the San Joaquin valley receiving an equal amount of support for lifting of that surplus water up the San Joaquin river for the sake of navigation."

The Sacramento valley irrigationists' proposal to importune Congress and the 1929 State Legislature to finance the Kennett dam, and also one on the Feather river near Oroville, one on the Yuba near Smartville, one on the Bear river and one on the American river near Folsom will be supplemented by demands from the San Joaquin valley farmers for aid in building a series of low dams and pumping plants which will boost the water released from the Kennett reservoir up the San Joaquin river.

The San Joaquin Valley irrigationists, impelled not only by hope of future development possibilities but also by actual necessity for more water to maintain the present irrigation projects because of the lowering of the water table, particularly in the southern end of the valley, are aroused by Roy Baily when he was state engineer for the storage of water in reservoirs in the Sacramento valley and its divertion to the arid San Joaquin, be developed as a whole.

The total estimated cost of the Baily plan for coordinated water development is $317,000,000. The portion of this allocated to lifting the surplus water up the San Joaquin river until it is available for irrigation projects in that region is prohibitive if it must be charged aaginst the bare land in Dennett's opinion.

But under a co-operative state and federal program, California will reap the benefit of a vast amount of hydro-electric power generated at the Kennett site. And this asset should be considered in a general financing proposition including the reclaiming of millions of acres in the semi-arid San Joaquin, Dennett announced.

In portions of this valley trees and crops are now dying because of the failure of the underground water supply, and according to Baily's investigation, there is not enough water available without transferring to this water shed some of the surplus Sacramento Valley supply.

Under the Baily plan electric power ,aggregating an amount equal to the present total production of power in Northern California could be developed to use by the state for the San Joaquin valley pumping projects, according to Dennett. Or if the federal government undertakes the Kennett damh construction it could create a source of revenue which might in time pay the entire cost of the enterprise.

"The best interests of the state would be served by considering the development of our water resources as a coordinated whole," he insisted.

Women Are Not "Natural Criminals"

(By Capitol News Bureau)

SACRAMENTO, February 8 — Women are not "natural criminals"—not even the ones who shoot their husbands or embezzle their employer's funds.

That, at least, is the conclusion of Miss Josephine Jackson, superintendent of the new women's prison at an Quentin, who has supervised women at the penitentiary for eleven years.

"There is no criminal type among the women prisoners," Miss Jackson declared," crime among women generally follows an uncontrolled impulse, it is only a detour from the normal path of life."

The prominent factors leading to crime among women are:

1. Love of finery, leading to larceny, embezzlement.
2. Revenge, springing from jealousy.

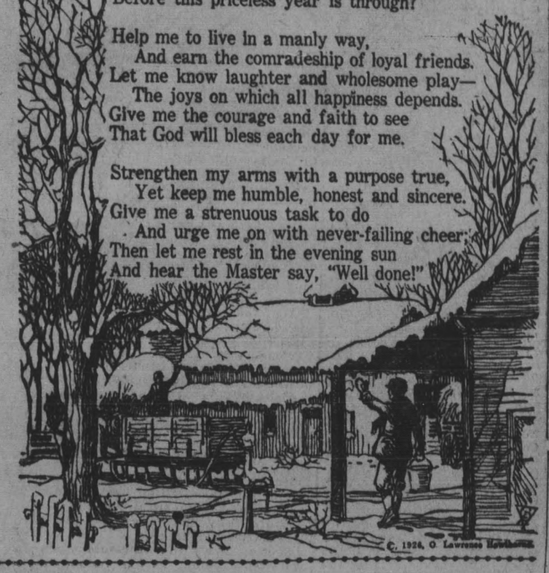
A Morning Meditation

by O. Lawrence Hawthorne

What may I ask of the glad New Year,
Whose golden dawning paints the eastern sky?
What may I hope to accomplish here
As days and seasons move so swiftly by?
What shall I promise myself to do
Before this priceless year is through?

Help me to live in a manly way,
And earn the comradeship of loyal friends.
Let me know laughter and wholesome play—
The joys on which all happiness depends.
Give me the courage and faith to see
That God will bless each day for me.

Strengthen my arms with a purpose true,
Yet keep me humble, honest and sincere.
Give me a strenuous task to do
And urge me on with never-failing cheer;
Then let me rest in the evening sun
And hear the Master say, "Well done!"



Burlingame-San Mateo High School Bankrupt

One of the most alarming crises ever faced by a school district in this state is confronting the people of the San Mateo-Burlingame high school district at the present time. The district is declared to be practically bankrupt and in need of $84,600 in order to continue in operation. The startling news was made public this week following a meeting of the board of trustees of the district.

The announcement of the serious financial condition was immediately the signal for the holding of mass meetings throughout the district by various improvement clubs and other organizations.

The matter was discussed at a meeting of the Burlingame city council Monday evening, and that body voted unanimously to call for the recall of the board of trustees of the school district and for that of W. L. Glascock, the superintendent. Similar action was taken the same night by a joint session of the East Side Improvement Club and of the San Mateo Heights Improvement Club.

At the meeting of the city council in Burlingame City Attorney Fletcher Cutler stated that the only measure which would save the district would be a direct tax to make up the deficit. This tax, he stated, would not be voted by the people if the present board of trustees and Glascock remain in office.

Glascock and the trustees have announced their intention of refusing to resign. "It will," stated Glascock, "be much easier to stand by my guns and help straighten out this trouble than to resign under fire." It is planned to have an immediate audit of the books of the district made by an accountant, in order that the school board may have a definite statement of the condition.

The schools must not close, Glascock stated, unless the schools are in operation 170 days of the year they will lose the state appropriation of $140,00. The teachers, also are working under contracts, and will be able to collect their salaries even though the schools were closed. While the district may be without funds at the present time, he stated, the salaries of the teachers would be collectable as soon as the taxes were collected.

The suggestion that the board borrow enough money to carry on the work of the schools was not considered, as an opinion from District Attorney Swart held that the board could not legally pay back such a loan from the taxes to be collected next year, nor could it pay the expenses of one year from the taxes of the next.

In explaining the shortage of the district, Glasscock stated that it was due to an unexpected increase in the enrollment which necessitated added expense and also to the added expense of a building program for the schools.

Permanent Walk Asked For Woodside Road

The proposal made by the board of trustees of this city at a previous meeting that a four foot gravel walk be constructed along the Woodside road for the use of pedestrians, was vigorously opposed by members of the South Redwood Improvement Club who appeared at the meeting of the council this week.

The South Redwood people stated that a walk on the north side of the road as planned would not accomplish the one thing which was desired, providing a safe way for the children to attend the Washington school. It was pointed out that a large majority of the children attending the school lived on the south side of the road and that the walk as planned would necessitate their crossing the road twice each time that they were going and coming from school.

The construction of a culvert along the ditch which parallels the road was asked, the culvert to be covered by a concrete sidewalk. This matter was referred to City Engineer Charles Dimmitt that he might prepare plans and specifications for the proposed improvement. The cost of the work is proposed to be covered by a large assessment district.

Flood Contest Settled Says Rumor

There as a persistent rumor about the courthouse yesterday that the contest in the Flood estate had been settled. The rumor coming as it does on the heels of teh filing of the appraiser's report might have some bearing.

Last year Constance May Gavin brought the contest for a child's share of the estate alleging in her petition to be a daughter of the late James L. Flood.

The demurrers have been settled and soon the case would be up for trial.

The taking of the deposition of Mrs. Willetts has been continued from time to time for several months and this fact may also have a bearing on the rumor.

High School NOTES

Sequoia Plays Good Game at Campbell

Not one field goal did the Sequoia Union High Srhool 130-pound basketball team allow the Campbell high team when it defeated the prune pickers by a score of 21 to 5 on the latter's court last Friday night.

The Sequoia team pepped up by a rousing rally and smarting under a defat at the hands of the Camels in an early season game, played air tight defense work and found the hoop with the casaba many times, something that the Camels failed to do.

The real surprise of the fracas was the showing of Curtis Rayer at standing guard in the place of Bennie Biggerstaff. "Curty" was on the job all of the time but was fouled out of the game in the last quarter.

Allain Lutje was high point man with seven points and played a splendid game at center. "Frenchy" Campagen at one forward and "Ike" Britschgi at the other, played consistent ball and added many points to the score. Captain Tom Shine played a steady game at running guard and contributed to the score with several long shots.

The 30-pound division is tied up now with Sequoia, Palo Alto and Campbell each with three victories and two defeats.

The unlimited fiesta was rather tame compared to the first game. The Campbell team ran away with the Sequoia team by a score of 27 to 11.

Captain Jim Jones of the Indians contributed seven of the eleven points to his team, while "Ike" Harper showed a surprising ability to break up the Camel plays before they got a start. "Chuck" DeLacy did not play up to the form he showed in the Palo Alto game and George Sepulvada and "Sugar" Stewart have yet to find the hoop with any consistency.

Captain Merrill of the prune pickers was high point of the game with 13 points and Clouser was second with 6 points from the center of the floor.

The roof of the Campbell gym was inclined to be leaky and the floor got wet in spots thus showing up the game considerably and causing misplays.

Some 300 Sequoians journied to the game in the pouring rain to give their teams support.

For the past week every effort was being made to put forward the bond issue. Last Thursday, members of the boys' and girls' councils personally distributed miniature papers called the "Bond Issue," through Redwood City.

A student from the San Mateo high school has promised to come down and play a few xylophone numbers. This concluded the group that has been definitely lined up but more probably will be added to this list.

LOCAL BOY WINS PRIZE FOR ESSAY

Lloyd Andrson of Menlo Park, a student of the Sequoia Union High School, recently received the fifth prize in an essay contest conducted by the Current Science, a scientific publication issued in New York for school use. The Seqooia boy took as his topic the manufacture of cement as carried on at the local plant of the Pacific Portland Cement Co. His story follows:

"To most of us the manufacture of cement is just a series of dusty, dirty operations. But in the West, at Redwood City, California, they have a new and better way. In the dry process the raw materials are first blended and then crushed and dried, after which they are ground and burned. In the wet process, at Redwood City, the raw materials are first ground and then water is added, forming a mixture known as "slurry," which is blended in huge tanks and then burned.

All but one of the necessary materials needed for cement manufacture are close at hand in Redwood. Here, in unlimited quantities, are oyster shells from the bay and the natural mud. Gypsum, the third ingredient, is imported. There are millions of tons of these oyster shells, covering about 30,000 acres of tidelands to an average depth of 30 feet.

The shells are taken from the bay and dumped on barges. These are towed to the company's dock and spilled into huge storage pits. From these pits shells —mixed with proper proportion of clay— are transferred to the grinding mills, which are giant cylinders of steel nearly filled with steel balls tumbling around as the mill revolves, reducing the shells and clay to a fine mass. Water is then added in the bending tanks, forming a thin "soup" known as "slurry." This slurry is then pumped into the kilns, mammoth cylinders lined with fire-brick, turning at the rate of one complete turn in ninety seconds. Rolling slowly down the kiln the mixaure is first dried, then heated and as it reaches the end fused into clinker.

The clinker falls into the coolers, then drops into the storage pile.

Taken from the storage pile, the clinker goes once more thru a series of grinding mills. A little gypsum, having the property of regulating the 'setting" qualities of the cement, is added and we have the finished product —Portland Cefent. This cement was formerly packed in cloth sacks, but now it is shipped in heavy paper sacks. These are much easier and healthier to handle because they are less dusty.

Airport at Millbrae Shows Rapid Ga...

Business got off to a flying start for 1928 at Mills Field, San Francisco's municipal airport, according to the January report just filed by Supervisor Milo F. Kent, chairman of San Francisco's airport committee.

The Kent report shows 918 flights and landings, carrying 1162 passengers, without a single mishap, to and from all parts of the United States. This makes a total of 3813 flights and landings and 5722 passengers since Mills Field opened for business last May. Hundreds of tons of mail and merchandise also have been handled in the Mills Field service.

In the eight and one half months of Mills Field operation business has grown continuously necessitating constant expansion of the equipment. New hangars are now being built at Mills Field to accommodate the increasing demands of commercial aviation and the San Francisco board of supervisors is considering acquiring additional land adjacent the 250 acres now in use at Mills Field where several flying schools and agencies of airplane manufacturers have leased space.

Mills Field is now generally recognized as "the model municipal airport of America" and many cities have secured its plans to follow in the construction of airports.

After an extensive survey of airports in the San Francisco Bay region, Mills Field was selected as the terminus for a new passenger air line opened March 5 between San Francisco and Seattle by the West Coast Air Transport Company.

(By Capitol News Bureau)

SACRAMENTO, February 8 — California's Big Parade has started, the 1928 auto parade with 1,300,000 machines already licensed.

With the State Motor Vehicle department counting its cars as well as "watching the motorists' step", the fact was disclosed that with the advent of the "steam heated" storm proof cars, winter driving is as popular as summer.

On January 16 there were actually more cars rolling along the highways of the state than last July, according to T. H. Ennis, state highway maintenance engineer.

Idle Island

WNU Service.

STORY FROM THE START

On the verge of nervous collapse, due to overwork, Gay Delane, artist, seeks rest at Idle Island. She rents a cottage, the "Lone Pine," from an island character, the "Captain," and his sister, Alice Andover, "administrator." Gay finds the cottage is tenanted by an elderly lady, "Auntaimiry," who consents to move to another abode, the "Apple Tree." On an exploration of the island Gay is horrified by the appearance of the drifting body of a drowned man. A bullet wound in the temple shows the man to have been murdered. Gay returns with the "Captain," but they find no body there. Gay, being unable to convince her neighbors of the truth, draws a picture of the face of the dead man, intending to send it to the authorities. She meets a stranger, to whom she tells the story and shows the picture. He asks for it, but Gay refuses. Next day the picture is missing. "Rand" Wallace, wanderer, and considered something of a "black sheep" by the islanders, surprises Gay at household tasks. Gay's acquaintance with Rand ripens into affection. Gay determines to stay for the winter. The stranger whom Gay had met the day of her discovery of the body introduces himself as Ronald Ingram. "Auntaimiry" tells Gay of her son, "Buddy," who has been missing for years. Rand is suspicious of Ronald Ingram, and apprehensive of some evildoing in a house known as the "Little Club," apparently unoccupied "Auntaimiry" is planning her Christmas party

"I'm sorry he chose the Lone Pine for his hibernating this afternoon. He cheated me out of a pleasant hour. Does he think best in the top of your pine tree? I saw him perching there as if he were quite at home."

Gay laughed merrily. "No, indeed. He was putting up an aerial. He is building me a radio. No, he does not hibernate in my tree top, and I wish you had come in. You would quite like him."

"No, I shouldn't like him.—Not him, under any circumstances.—And I do not enjoy other people's cooing; it riles me."

"We don't coo. Fancy the state of Maine cooing."

Ronald Ingram reverted again moodily to talk of the land. He was not yet sure what he really wanted to do with it, he said, wondered if he would not be wise to sell it outright.

"I haven't money enough to finance things on a big scale. Of course if the boom ever comes—and it ought to boom—it seems the logical summer refrigerator for New York and Boston, yes, even for Washington. I have two companies figuring on it. What would you think of a Chinese group, imitation bamboo stuff, pagodas and all that? I know a Chinese artist from Boston. Moy Sen, his name is. He's been up a few times making sketches for me. Clever chap he is, for a Chink. He was here yesterday. He thinks we can swing it big."

Mercurially, Gay was fully in sympathy with him again. By his candor he had entirely stilled the suspicions that Rand had stirred to life. How frankly he spoke of the Chinese artist. How natural his explanation of the little foreigner's presence. In the face of his disarming, ingenuous outspokenness, his honest admission of his financial limitations, how very petty and narrow and mean appeared the cold suspicious nature of New England.

He said he was obliged to return to Portland on the early boat, and Gay went with him to the door.

"You are very game, I know, but do, please, be careful. Keep yourself locked in and everybody else locked out, won't you?"

The genuineness of his solicitude touched Gay. "I will be careful," she said. "I wish you were staying all winter. You are such a pleasant interlude."

"Interlude between Cavaliers," he said regretfully. "Still it is something to see you, to touch your hand. I am grateful for that. You are very—sweet. You will not forget me, will you?"

Half an hour later Rand came, and without waiting for a word from him Gay launched at once into a long and fervid defense of Ronald Ingram.

"You may be right about some things, but on Ronald Ingram you are totally wrong. He's really a nice fellow, and you will like him. Perhaps he'll let you be Chief High Priest of his Chinese pagoda."

The next day he went to the city to look up the records of real-estate transfers. He found that the entire property of the Little club had been bought outright, for cash, by Ronald Ingram of New York city, and that all publication of the transfer had been withheld from the press at his request, presumably for business reasons. But the date of this purchase was not within the past month, as he had explicitly stated to Gay, but nearly two years earlier, since which time the place had not been offered either for sale or rental, and all taxes had been promptly paid.

CHAPTER VIII

Rand kept a jealous watch over the Little club, and over the bit of forest land that served so effectually to conceal it from curious eyes. Every day with his gun he tramped the woods and shore, coming often upon the old house, as if by inadvertence, sometimes trying the doors tentatively, as did all casual strollers who passed that way. But in spite of his seeming nonchalance and the lazy aimlessness of his wanderings, he was always sharply alert for signs of life.

With powerful field-glasses he examined the cove from a distance, and watched every day for a cloud of smoke to tinge the blue above the woods. But all of his efforts were unavailing.

After the first few tingling, nerve-racked days, Gay's excitement dagged, her interest waned and all of her suspicions rested.

"Oh, it's just a bunch of rum runners, if it's anybody at all," she assured him, half jealous of his immersion in the mystery. "Pay attention to me. It's none of our business.—Besides, maybe he's right, after all—Ronald Ingram. Perhaps the Chink is just an artist from Boston."

But Rand would not be drawn from the pursuit. The mass of evidence was too convincing. And now that his suspicions were fully aroused, he marveled that he had never before realized how completely the Little club was adapted for secret criminal exploitation—as was the island itself for that matter, securely bedded in sanctity as it seemed.

The occupation of the summer colony continued but for a scant three months of the year, and with its going the entire northern peninsula was deserted. Except for the Lone Pine on the hilltop and the Apple Tree in the orchard below, there was no residence within a mile of the cove, which was admirably protected, shut in snugly by high cliffs to east and west, while directly before it lay the little rock-girt dome of Punkin knob. While the cove offered a perfect landing for small boats, it lay to the west of the course taken by ships going in and out of Portland harbor.

Examining those locked doors and windows afresh, with his suspicions aroused, Rand saw clearly that it was now far mor securely shut in than it had been in former years of its desertion. Every crack and seam of the frames that covered windows and doors had been sealed from within. It was locked from chimney to solid rock foundation, as tight as a drum.

Often, in wandering about, both in the woods and near the club, Rand had a feeling that he was watched, but all his efforts to discover the secret source of this were unavailing. Gay admitted that she, too, felt watched sometimes. She said it was the troubled spirit of the body that had come to her in the cove.

And then, after three weeks of keeping a watch so strict that he would have sworn that nothing untoward could possibly have occurred in the island without his knowledge, it was not, after all, the result of his assiduous guard that brought result, but the idle curiosity of the Females Wallace, the thing that Rand particularly disliked and took pleasure to decry.

"Rand," began Miss Lida timidly, as they sat at supper, "you don't know who is moving off the island do you?"

"No," he said briefly, "Is anybody?"

"Well, a big furniture van came by this afternoon. It went up toward the point. I walked up to the end of the lane, but it was out of sight, and I don't know if it went down the back shore or up to Colony corner. But it didn't come down."

Then for the first time Rand turned around with some interest. "It didn't come down," he repeated. "It must have come down. There's nobody on the Back Shore, nor up at the Colony either. It must have gone back to town on the last ferry."

"No, it didn't. Mary Malcolm was watching for it, to ask the driver."

"If I hear anything about it, I'll let you know," Rand said, with unusual kindness.

Quickly he excused himself from the table and went out. At the end of the lane he paused to consider. The Back Shore was a long open road, subject to traffic. If a strange motor van went that way, it had legitimate business there. But the Colony corner, although nearly half a mile from the Little club, which stood at the other end of the forest, was separated from it only by thick and impenetrable forest. It was not the nearest point from the club to the motor road, but it was by all odds the most desirable for one who desired secrecy.

Anyone, then, who wished to remove something from the Little club without attracting undue attention would most certainly run a car to the end of the road at Colony corner, for the road ended there, and carry a secret burden through the dark and deserted woods to that point.

With this in mind, Rand turned up to the Colony corner on a dead run. Like every other islander, he carried in his pocket a small electric flash. But like no other islander, he carried also a revolver on his hip.

As he neared the end of the road, where it fell abruptly away to a steep decline of rocks, he skirted wider into the woods behind the Shingle shack, and drew up slowly to the fringe of the woods. It was very dark, but distinctly he could make out a huge bulky shadow against the trees that outlined the end of the road. It was the motor van, beyond all shadow of doubt. There was no light attached, no sound from within, no stir of life. Rand held his breath to listen, but it was silent as a tomb. Suspecting the presence of a guard, he dared not venture on examination, but as he knew the van could not possibly get off the island until the ferry at six twenty-five in the morning, he felt he had plenty of time.

Gingerly, then, he worked his way to the rear of the cottage, with which he was familiar, and let himself into a basement window and up through the cellar stairs to the front room. There with blankets from an adjoining bedroom, and pillows from the couch, he made himself comfortable on the floor beside the window—too comfortable, for he fell sound asleep.

Hours later he was awakened by the sudden sound of a motor, and cursing his negligence he sprang up. It was not yet full daylight,—but the pale gray mist that creeps between day and night, holding a hand of each, lay over the island.

In the driver's seat of the van a man huddled in a great coat, his cap drawn low, his hands encased in shaggy gloves. The motor was cold, and he was obliged to press the starter again and again.

When the engine ran smoothly at last, the driver backed it around, carefully, for the road was narrow and the rocky cliff rugged and precipitous, with trees jutting close. As it turned Rand saw the license plates, Maine, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, in conformity with the law which requires interstate vehicles to bear the license of each, and Rand had time to jot down the New Hampshire number before the car was finally backed away from him.

Rand looked at his watch. It was a quarter past six. The first ferry went over at six twenty-five.

"Well planned for a getaway," he thought, approvingly. "No time for Mary Malcolm to ask them any questions."

The guard stepped briskly down from the rocks and threw open the big doors in the rear of the van. A sudden jerk of his head toward the wood was evidently a signal, for on the instant appeared a line of men, small, stooped and shuffling, who came in a sort of loping run down the narrow path from the woods, single file, their soft feet making no sound at all, either on the rocks or among the dry dead needles of the pines. The guard at the back of the car gave each a hand in turn, and swung them up, deftly, into the van, one after another.

And as they turned about, facing him, to make the lithe spring into the car, Rand saw their faces. They were Chinese, every one, twenty-five of them by count. The guard hastily closed the door, snapping a lock upon it, and sprang up beside the driver, and almost before he was in his seat the car was rolling swiftly away down the cinder road.

For one moment Rand was irresolute. He could telephone to the police on the mainland, and a detail of them would meet the ferry at the pier and take the truck with its foreign freight into custody. But on afterthought, it seemed that the capture of these twenty-five little old Chinese men meant nothing. It was the ring that counted, the band that had grouped itself together to mock at the law. Making his decision quickly, he hurriedly got out of the cottage and ran through the woods toward the Little club.

Hastily selecting the trail in the rocks where the descent was least difficult, a trail held in his memory from boyhood adventures years before, Rand dropped swiftly down, from crag to crag, until he stood in the cove. The one great door beneath the piazza was securely locked, every seam and crack impenetrably sealed.

Reluctantly he abandoned hope of admission from below and made his way up the cliffs once more. Rand knew the construction of the building perfectly, having assisted indeed in in its erection. In the beginning there had been no bank of loose rocks beneath the piazza other than that afforded by nature, and there was a window to the basement on the eastern side, opening just above ground. Later on, for the sake of warmth, small rocks had been thrown under, and although Rand felt some distaste for the task, he felt sure that by pulling out the rocks, he could get at the window beneath the piazza floor, and thus into the basement. It was unlikely that the small basement window would be subjected to such rigid sealing, sheltered as it was behind six feet of piazza floor well walled with rocks.

In spite of his profession of indolence, Rand was not averse to labor when the end justified the effort, so he fell sturdily to work at a distance which he judged, and correctly as events proved, would lead to the basement window.

It was a long time before his efforts were rewarded by a cleared window, the usual small basement window, perhaps two feet long by eighteen inches high. The glass was covered on the inside with a thick black curtain, so that he gained no view of the interior, and the window itself he found, to his disappointment, not only locked, but sealed with a fine cement, or wax, along the four edges of it.

Convinced, however, that something of great value must be concealed there to necessitate these precautions, he resolved to gain admittance at all costs. With renewed eagerness he attacked the window with the stout knife which had served him well a hundred times in the emergencies of boating, fishing and hunting, and worked it slowly around the edges, pecking at the cement which bound it in place. And finally he felt it give, sway slightly beneath his hand, and drew it carefully out.

Cautiously he thrust his hand into the aperture, and drew aside the black curtain which veiled it. The room was in absolute darkness. He listened long, but could hear no slightest sound in any portion of the house. Breathlessly, then, his revolver cocked alertly in his right hand, with the left he extended his pocket flash, pressed the button, and swept the yellow light into the room, moving it slowly about, inch by inch, from wall to wall. The silence was like the grave itself.

Rand felt the emptiness of the house, sensed it, and unwilling to lose an opportunity he might not have again, he determined to go in, although realizing fully the risk he ran.

To get in he was obliged to replace both his flash and his revolver in his pocket, and drop down, defenseless and in the dark, but this was a chance he felt he was obliged to take. And after that breathless moment of his descent, when he flashed his light into the room again, it seemed surprisingly commonplace, just what one would expect to find the basement of an old abandoned clubhouse.

Deep Impress Lincoln Left Not Equaled

The centenary of Abraham Lincoln's birth was celebrated on February 12, 1909, with an even deeper interest than such events usually arouse in a nation. Since then the Lincoln legend has grown. Memorials to the Great Emancipator have multiplied. Each succeeding anniversary of his birth has been marked by what has come to be the usual impressive and nation-wide observance.

Abraham Lincoln has been dead for nearly sixty-three years. Few who remember him remain alive. The issues he raised have long since passed. In many ways the thought and the very feelings of the nation have changed, and yet no figure in its history has ever so completely captured and held its imagination as has this sorrowful son of the frontier.

Here was a man who came of a wandering and illiterate, sometimes shiftless and always shifting and footloose stock. They knew little of books. He had little schooling. It was a family of "pore folks" in a new and "pore" country.

In that "half-faced camp" in the Indiana woods his mother taught him his "letters" from the old "blue-back speller" of American tradition. By the firelight he spelled out sentences from the statutes of Indiana.

Lincoln's "Library."

Somehow in that new, raw country the "Arabian Nights" came into his hands. He read the Bible. Shakespeare, "Aesop's Fables" and "Pilgrim's Progress." He knew the "Life of Washington," by old Parson Weems. He dipped a quill pen made from the turkey buzzard's wing feather in a home-made ink compounded of roots of the blackberry briar and copperas. He wrote with the tip of a burnt stick or a dead coal from the fireplace on a fresh-split clapboard.

One book had a profound influence upon him and possibly upon American political history. The Lincoln family were Democrats. He read in his boyhood "The Speeches of Henry Clay," stiff with the strong and pungent Whig doctrines of a century ago.

Clay became to Lincoln "the beau ideal of a statesman." When Lincoln entered Illinois politics in 1832 he was a Whig. The torch of Clay had lighted a greater flame in the Sangamon valley, but Clay, dying in 1852 with his life work of compromise doomed to ruin, did not live to see the glory of this new fire.

Great by Instinct.

Out of the raw, rough and ready school of frontier politics and frontier law Lincoln somehow brought the power and experience needed for the nation's greatest emergency. And as the years revealed, he brought something greater. The word humanity fails to describe it.

It included a deep understanding, a great generosity and an utter absence of malice, resentment and vindictiveness. Somewhere he found a tract no trained diplomat and no gentleman born to the purple ever excelled. He owned a tested strength tried as by fire and as sure as steel. There was in him also a strange and almost indescribable instinct for the right.

When he conquered, it was by the power of truth. That may be why no other American statesman has left so deep an impress upon the thought and the imagination of the world. There is no more romantic figure in the annals of statecraft than this tall and strangely sorrowful, sometimes humorous and always burdened, child of the clearings and the prairies.

Dignity and honesty, strength and generosity, charity and understanding, were the hammers under which he welded a broken nation. Such qualities are always needed in public life. The man who has them is a statesman. Lacking them he can never rise to greatness.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The national capital is often called "The City of Beautiful Distances," and this photograph, made from atop the Post Office department in downtown Washington, tends to prove it. Through the arch is shown the Washington monument.

Idea That Gettysburg Address Failed to Impress Hearers Is Erroneous

The impression left by the history books is that the beauty and significance of Abraham Lincoln's address at Gettysburg were virtually overlooked by the press and the public at the time. The impression is almost as if the newspapers of that day had said, after flamboyant reports of Edwin Everett's long and eloquent oration: President Lincoln also spoke.

That this impression is not entirely correct is shown by the Ohio State Journal's account of the dedicatory services, reprinted recently in the "News Our Grandfathers Read" from our issue of November 23, 1863. It was the fashion in those days to print news in the order of its chronological development and Mr. Everett's address came first in the story, but no lack of appreciation of President Lincoln's was shown. A notation of applause was inserted no fewer than seven times in the quotation of the very brief speech and the editor concluded the account as follows:

"The President's calm but earnest utterance of this brief and beautiful address stirred the deepest fountains of feeling and emotion in the hearts of the vast throng before him; and, when he had concluded, scarcely could an unfearful eye be seen, while sobs of smothered emotions were heard on every hand."

Evidently the great masterpiece was not unappreciated at the time of its delivery and immediately afterward. It has been more appreciated since. It never will be appreciated less until men and women lose the power to see beauty in the noblest sentiments simply clothed in the noblest language.—Ohio State Journal.

Let us go on to extend the area of our usefulness, until the light of the stars on our banner shall shine upon 500,000,000 of free and happy people!—Lincoln.

Howe About—

By ED HOWE

I once knew a surly man who married a gentle woman. For a year people said she had wrought a great change in him, as he became cheerful, satisfied with life, and did many excellent things.

But in three years he was worse than ever before; all his former bad habits returned, and, in addition, he suffered the pangs of jealousy.

I have often wondered who was to blame for the terrible row that followed. The woman saved the man for a year. Could she have continued her good work? What happened to interfere with one of the most successful marriages, apparently, ever known in that community? Was the husband to blame, or the wife?

The woman still has her power to charm; after her husband committed suicide, she became so pleasing again that another surly man married her, and, the first year, people said she had saved him.

"Near where I live," a man writes me, "there are three small children so ill-behaved that they are the terror of their parents and the neighborhood. Property in the immediate vicinity has become almost worthless; the father and mother of the bad children have become almost crazy. It is really a serious and disturbing situation; two worthy parents being ruined, three children going to the devil, and a dozen neighbors preparing to sell their homes at a loss."

* * *

It is much easier and better to be a gentleman, a homeowner, a good mechanic, an agreeable neighbor, a good citizen, a good and successful farmer, foreman, superintendent, business man, or millionaire, than a poor man howling for help. The help the poor get from the government and their neighbors is scanty. It is always easier to make a living than it is to beg it.

* * *

In a pretty play a woman has compromised herself with a man. A letter from that man is delivered to her before her husband. The latter knows whom the letter is from. His wife hands it to him and says she does not care to open it. "Very well," he says, "then there is only one thing to do." And he throws it into the fire. All the women in the audience applaud. In real life under such circumstances, a man would have raised three or four different kinds of h—l.

That was a good thing said the other day by a Frenchman: that France and Germany were in position to let bygones be bygones, each having won a great victory over the other.

American dentists are said to be the best in the world; yet I have never seen a set of false teeth that looked natural. They are made too pretty, like wigs. Why does not a realist appear among wig makers and make a wig with a bald spot on top?

The people laugh at many things in private, as laughter at them in public is prohibited.

I once knew a large, fine-looking man with excellent restraint. If a thing was not good for him, he let it alone. He fell dead one night in a crowd of drunken men, although he hadn't taken a drop. There were seven of the drunken men, and five of them lived to a fairly old age. I do not understand luck, except that its pranks are sometimes surprising.

In reading, one encounters the same old ideas and expressions for weeks, and suddenly encounters something new. This is the reason we devote time to reading, and drag through the mass of old stuff. Reading is like hunting wild game: long periods of tramping through the fields in the hope of a sudden flight, and a shot. Long ago the country was full of wild animals, but, like new ideas, they have become very scarce. Many have ceased to hunt at all, there is so little in it.

I have never been one of those severe critics who expect the people to be without faults. All I recommend is reasonable effort in getting rid of the worst ones, and decent attempt to hide the remainder. Certain of our kind show a skill in hiding their nakedness that has been called art: they have deceived so well as to be credited with a beauty they do not naturally possess.

An old saying is that a man should marry a woman half his age, plus seven. According to this rule, a man of thirty should marry a woman of twenty-two.

I have long been impressed with the absurdity of soloists at a symphony concert: of sixty or eighty instrumentalists, trained and collected at great expense, resting while a single individual bawls a song. I am supported in the contention by high authority: Leopold Stokowski, director of the Philadelphia symphony orchestra, so capable an organization that it will tour Europe.

Thomas Edison declares that if there was any one single thing, more than any other, that would improve the world, it would be the coming true of the Burns line, "to see ourselves as others see us."

"There are too many Pat Rileys in the world," continued the great inventor. "Pat, you know, was railing at the stupidity and idleness of Tim. 'Sure, he fished for an hour at the mill pond an' never caught a thing!' declared Pat. 'I never did see such a time waster!'

"'But how do you know that he fished for an hour and never caught anything?' demanded a friend.

"'Sure, wasn't I hidin' in the bushes watchin' him all the time?' defended Pat."

Fish Consume Mosquitoes

In a recent paper prepared for the Smithsonian institution, Dr. David Starr Jordan treats of the efficiency of the so-called mosquito fish as an exterminator of carriers of malaria and other less dangerous but equally irritating mosquitoes. In 1904 Doctor Jordan was instrumental in introducing this fish into the Hawaiian islands, where it has since become very abundant and has practically rid the islands of mosquitoes.

Gas Traps Birds

Yellowstone Park, Wyo.—Natural poison gas, seeping up through fissures in the earth into caves, is frequently the cause of the death of birds and small mammals in Yellowstone National park, and Park Naturalist E. J. Sawyer is attempting to find out why the luckless little victims venture into these deadly traps.

He is disinclined to believe the theory most commonly advanced that the birds go into the caves for shelter as cold weather comes on in the fall.

"It is my present belief that, in general, the bird victims are not particularly attracted by anything at all, but that in the restlessness characteristic of their spring and autumn movements they venture into all manner of accessible places and are then overcome by the gas. The species affected are small perching birds of various kinds, such as sparrows, warblers, wrens and thrushes; nor has it been observed that any species or group of these pays a toll out of proportion to its relative general abundance.

"That a desire for warmth is not the main attraction seems further indicated by the fact that the Townsend solitaire is so frequently found dead in the caves. This bird, an all-year resident in the park and apparently unaffected by even the extreme cold of midwinter, would scarcely be impelled to seek extraordinary warmth in spring and fall.

"One of the most abundant species of small birds in this region is the Clark crow, or nutcracker, yet I have seldom if ever found a Clark crow in the poison caves, and yet it would seem a comparatively short step from his ordinary habits for the nutcracker to enter one of these shallow caverns—not so pronounced a departure from routine as it is in the case of the tree-loving warblers, which are among the most frequent victims.

"It is my belief that the nutcracker does enter the caves, but, owing to his greater size and greater power of resistance, emerges with impunity—though doubtless, in each case, an older and a wiser bird. Indeed, so far as my frequent observations go, it is a rare thing to find any bird larger than the small thrushes that has succumbed to the gas."

Not Able to Play

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

IT IS said that the little six-year-old prince of Rumania, when it was first announced to him that he was king of a great country and heir to seventy millions of dollars, did not take kindly to the idea. Young as he was he realized to some extent the responsibility which his new obligation placed upon him, and a serious, sad look came over his little face.

"I shall not be able to play any more," he said.

It is a serious situation when, whether from lack of opportunity or from lack of inclination, one is not able to play. Nothing more than play recreates a man. We are in a sad state, indeed, when we can no longer play.

A well-known business man, successful, energetic, and still full of vigor, retired from the active duties of his business two or three years ago. When asked why, when he was still so able to carry on his work he had determined to give it up, he said:

"Just because I want to play," and playing for him meant work of another sort, freedom from the hampering restraints of business obligations. Those who are following his movements since he resigned from the position which for many years he held cannot see that he is any less busy than he was before. He is playing to good effect.

Some people do not know how to play. For two or three summers I have been at the same hotel with Graves, when he was on what he called his vacation. He did not know how to play. He was restless in the morning until the mail came in. He wandered about the grounds meditating, his head down, his mind taken up with problems that should have been left a thousand miles away. If he engaged anyone in conversation it was to discuss matters of business, or to reveal his agitation and worry over the unsolved difficulties which he should have forgotten when he shut down his desk and left his office for a month of rest.

He was like a lion shut up in a cage, pacing backward and forward, throwing himself against the bars, or sleeping gloomily in his cell. He took no interest in sport of any kind. He was happy only when he got back to the regular routine of work, for he did not know what it meant to play.

There is an old man down the streets—not so old either as years go—who has moved in from the country. He has many years yet ahead of him, if he takes life as he should. But he has nothing to do, and he has not learned to play. He ought to have a garden, or a dog, or an interest in chickens or tools or golf—anything to amuse himself. He might be happy if he even had an interest in books. As it is he walks up and down between the house and the street or wanders about the back yard picking up a dead branch here and there. Sad, it is! He doesn't know how to play.

One should learn early in life.

"Lifer" Sues Woman; Charged Cruel to Cat

Boston.—Jesse Pomeroy, "lifer," who entered the state prison at Charleston a seventeen-year-old boy, nearly fifty-one years ago, is the plaintiff in a $5,000 action in which he denies charges that he has been cruel to animals while in prison.

Pomeroy remains in his cell while two attorneys represent him before the Suffolk Supreme civil court.

The defendant is Alice Stone Blackwell of Dorchester, publisher of a magazine for women, who told the court that "she felt it a public duty to write a letter to a Boston newspaper in 1925 in opposition to a pardon for Pomeroy. The letter described his crime as much worse than that of Leopold and Loeb and repeated a rumor that Pomeroy, when permitted the companionship of a kitten, 'had skinned it alive.'"

Counsel for Pomeroy told the court that the suit was brought to "spike a lie" and said that animals had been Pomeroy's only friends in prison.

Seeks to Make Blend of Light and Music

Philadelphia.—A basic patent for an invention to blend light with music has been granted to Mrs. Mary Hallock Greenwalt. Mrs. Greenwalt has been conducting experiments in the blending of light and sound for 27 years. She believes that her patent is the first granted for a new means of expressing human emotions in rhythmic form.

While music is being rendered by singer, violinist, pianist or orchestra, Mrs. Greenwalt's apparatus floods the performer with lights of varying intensity. The fluctuations in light are intended to enhance the emotional and intellectual appeal of the music. The apparatus may be operated with a keyboard.

Years of training in music, of professional experience as a concert pianist, of study of physics, mechanics, physiology and psychology went into the achieving of the results now recognized by the granting of the basic patent.

Mrs. Greenwalt was born in Beirut, Syria, the daughter of Samuel and Sara Tabet Hallock. She came to the United States when a girl of eleven. After she left school she took up the study of music.

Will Written on Egg Shell Termed Valid

Brooklyn.—Wills have been written on eggshells, coalbins and bedposts, and might possibly be tattooed on the shoulder of an heiress and remain valid. Crenna Skellers told of these among other unusual legal documents in a talk on "The Power to Make a Will," given at the Academy of Music.

Among surprising provisions in wills of historical people, Miss Skellers announced that Gouverneur Morris willed that his wife's income be doubled if she married again. Thomas Paine, she said, although commonly considered an atheist, bequeathed his soul to God. Many Southerners, including George Washington, she revealed, freed their slaves in their wills.

Necessary to Watch Their Peculiar Pets

"Don't leave any snakes about tonight!" was the closing remark of Mr. S. G. Finch, president of the Naturalists' club, Chelsea, England, at a recent meeting of the members.

That may sound a curious exhortation, yet on this occasion it was a necessary one. The members of this club are in the habit of taking their pets—which cover a wide range—to meetings held in the parlor of the Six Bells, Chelsea, and on a previous occasion some one had inadvertently left behind a grass snake. Later the landlady had discovered the reptile and was terrified.

Every member of the club has a particular interest. One breeds fish in an aquarium, another studies ants, yet another is interested in butterflies, while the president is an authority on slugs, his specimens of which get to know him so well that they feed out of his hand.

Octopus Meat Cheap Food

Octopus meat is selling for six and seven cents a pound in Seattle, Tacoma and Portland, according to a writer in Capper's Weekly. "Orientals consider it a delicacy," he says, although he admits that he wouldn't care to try any. "To catch the devilfish," he continues, "fishermen use empty barrels attached to buoys sunk in deep water. A few strands of wire fastened across the open end coax the devilfish to entwine his tentacles thereon. Every morning the barrels are hauled up and one or two octopi are usually found in each. They are shipped alive in tanks to market and killed when sold."

TWO HOMES MADE HAPPY

By Women Who Used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I think it is the most wonderful medicine I ever tried," is the statement made by Mrs. Goldie Shoup of St. Joseph, Illinois. She declares that after taking the Compound she is in better health than before.

Mrs. J. Storms of 29 Lane Street, Paterson, N. J., writes: "I can not speak too highly of your medicine and I recommend it to all my friends."

These statements were taken from two enthusiastic letters which tell of the help that has been received from using the Vegetable Compound. Both Mrs. Shoup and Mrs. Storms were in a run-down condition which caused them much unhappiness. When women are suffering from lack of strength and from weakness, their own life and that of their family is affected. When they feel well and strong and are able to do their housework easily, happy homes are the result.

Thousands of testimonial letters have been received from women in different walks of life, stating that the Compound has helped them.

Serving the same purpose as the lettering on the back or front cover of the modern book, the manuscript rolls of early Egypt and Greece had projecting labels of papyrus or vellum, on which the title of the work was written. These labels hung outwards as the rolls lay on the library shelves or stood in the buckets which served as portable bookcases.—Gas Logic.

Sunshine Spreader

Greenville, S. C.—Spreading sunshine is the hobby of A. G. Gower, Greenville bookkeeper—figuratively, that is.

For eight years he has made and presented 80,000 bouquets to Greenville shut-ins, persons who are ill, and others.

Gower estimates that he cuts 250,000 blossoms annually from his garden, all of which are given away. The monetary return is nothing, but, he says "It is spreading sunshine wholesale, and my reward is so tremendous that it is boundless. I have a treasure house without limits."

He began his flower mission in a small way about 20 years ago. It was not until just after the World war in 1919 that it began to assume its present large proportions.

At that time he was asked to teach a Bible class in the United States Army Hospital No. 26, at Camp Sevier. "I'll teach the class," he said, "if you will let me bring the boys flowers every Sunday morning."

Then the work of spreading sunshine began in earnest. His flower garden became larger and larger, until today it occupies every nook and cranny of the half-acre plot around his home.

For 48 hours each week Gower is engaged with long columns of figures. But early mornings, late afternoons and evenings, find him in his garden caring for the flowers that have brought happiness to him and the persons who receive them. Saturday afternoons until dark he gathers the flowers for his baskets of bouquets.

Mystery Blasts Being Studied by Scientists

White Plains, N. Y.—Residents of northern Westchester county are searching to find a solution to the mysterious blast which rocked buildings and spread terror over several miles of the countryside. The heavy, dull roar and the quiver of the earth kept the county police busy answering telephone calls for hours.

Similar blasts have occurred at intervals of exactly six months within the last two years. They always come at night. The ground was shaken and the noise of the explosion was heard, but on each occasion it was unaccompanied by any flare or light such as would have been the case had the explosion been due to powder or gasoline or other known explosions that are set off by friction or heat.

Scientists have been asked to study the terrain in the vicinity and ascertain if the blasts are being caused by some disturbance deep under the earth.

Think Farm Children Superior to City Bred

Wellington, New Zealand.—Farm children are superior to city reared children, says a national report on a survey of the physical growth and mental attainment of the boys and girls of New Zealand. Superiority of farmers' children was most pronounced at the age of thirteen.

The survey included 20,000 town and country children ranging in age from ten to fourteen and was carried out by Dr. Ada Paterson, director of the health department's division of school hygiene, and Dr. E. Marsden, assistant director of education.

Money in Odors

East Pittsburgh, Pa.—Modern chemistry is demonstrating that even odors can be turned into dollars and cents.

Gases that have polluted the atmosphere are now being captured and converted into the liquids from which they originated, to the profit of both industry and the public.

Experts of the materials and process engineering department of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company decided that too many smells were going up the chimney in the process of treating insulation with resinous materials. So they trapped the gases as fast as they were generated, mixed them with water and then distilled this liquid, recovering from 80 to 90 per cent of the solvents used in the formula.

How far chemical engineers can go in eliminating and using fumes by liquefying them before they are discharged into the air has not yet been determined, but experiments now under way suggest that far-reaching results are possible. The saving already effected by the capture of used solvents is said to be considerable.

Chemists point out, however, that recovery methods might be too well perfected, for it is possible that some of the agents recovered from gases would themselves be difficult to destroy.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

Giant Octopus

The most horrible monster known to man is the giant squid of octopus. Some of these are 20 feet long with a great rasping tongue. He has ten enormous arms often fifty feet long and on the ends of these are suckers and claws. Their strength is so great that they could pull down a boat filled with men.

World-War Children Held Cold-Blooded

New York.—The World war made the children of its day a "bloodthirsty and cold-blooded" present generation, Fritz Kreisler, violinist, said on his return from an eight-month tour of Europe.

He asked reporters what had taken place in America during his absence. Among other things, he was told of the Hickman murder case and other recent crimes.

"It is those young people who were children in the war and who heard of the gigantic sacrifice of life and seem to have inherited all the bloodshed and cruelty of war," he said. "I know. I see it in their faces and in their actions."

"Thank God it is not the soldiers," he added. "They came back tired and weary and settled down."

Well Known Here

W. F. Hillegass, who died in St. Mary's hospital last Friday, was widely known in Menlo Park, where the latter years of his life were spent at the J. Henry Meyer estate. He was a brother of the late Mrs. Meyer and was 72 years old.

He was the eldest son of the late William Hillegass and was one of the first children born in Oakland. The father came to California in 1849 from Philadelphia and with his partner, Francis K. Shattuck, settled on the rolling lands that now make the city of Berkeley. The elder Hillegass gave a tract of land to induce the College of California, then in Oakland, to locate in Berkeley. This land is now a part of the University of California campus.

Both father and son were members of the Pioneer Society of California and were direct descendants of Michael Reed Hillegass, important figure in colonial history.

Good Program Promised

George Walsh, who has the program for the St. Patrick's entertainment in charge, is working hard to make a success of the affair. He is striving to make the coming entertainment the "best ever," and from the number of artists he is securing he is in a fair way to make it so.

Trustees Purchase Three Acres

The trustees of Ravenswood School district have purchased three acres of land on Oak street, adjoining Menalto Park, on which a substantial building is to be erected shortly. This growing locality is in need of more school facilities. The trustees foresee this and are providing for the future in the purchase of the site.

Next week the local real estate office of M. A. McCann will be closed and the present manager, J. L. Mollenhauer, transferred to McCann's Atherton office.

Mr. Mollenhauer during his stay in Menlo Park has made many friends by his uniform courtesy, kindness and square dealing. He is an affable gentleman, ever ready to help others and bestow acts of kindness on those in reach of his notice.

Observe Anniversary

In honor of the 37th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Perry Eyre of Menlo Park ,the couple's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Madison gave a dinner Friday evening at their San Francisco home. The wedding of Miss Nina Macondray and Perry Eyre took place February 3, 1891, at Fair Oaks. the Menlo Park home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Percival Selby. Only relatives and close friends were present because of the death a short time before, of Mrs. Domingo de Atherton.

The anticipated "fire works" in the city council Tuesday night did not materialize disappointing a big crowd that came to see and hear it.

At the last meeting of the council F. J. Furnivall protested against the purchase of a typewriter desk in Palo Alto by Councilman Harcom, who was absent from that meeting, insisting that local merchants should be given the preference. It was thought at the Tuesday night meeting a verbal clash would take place between the furniture dealer and the councilman but Furnivall was not present when Harcom arouse to make his explanation of the purchase of the desk, so there were no "fire works." Harcom explained that he went to Furnivall to buy the desk and was shown a catalogue disclosing the picture of a desk wanted at a price of $82.50. The price was too high, so Harcom directed the furniture man to secure a second hand article. After waiting for two weeks for Furnivall to report and hearing no reply, Harcom purchased a desk in Palo Alto for $46.50, similar to the one offered by the local dealer, thereby saving a goodly sum for the town government. The mayor was satisfied with the report and declared the incident closed.

W. J. Murray was reappointed a member of the Los Pulgas Abatement District. A resolution is to be presented by the city attorney officially confirming the appointment.

A. Miracoker applied for the position of janitor of the city hall at a salary of $10 a month. Application was order filed.

The bond of the city treasurer, amounting to $2,000 was approved and filed.

The financial commissioner, Mayor Blake, reported that there was $642.38 in the treasury.

The claim of F. J. Furnivall was ordered paid on motion of Harcom, who pointed out discrepancies in the bill but in as much as the chairs were ordered he deemed it his duty to see that the money was forthcoming for them.

The other claims allowed were as follows:

Thomas Furman, $29.18; Bear Gulch Water Co., $1.70; Pacific Gas and Electric Co., $3.20.

Ellis reported that he was concentrating on the street lighting question and would soon be able to report more fully.

Owing to the lack of funds and the large size of impending ordinances, hereafter ordinances are to be posted instead of published.

Three bulletin boards were ordered placed, one at the post office, another at the city hall and the third at Brown's grocery store.

The traffic ordinance which complies with the general traffic laws as printed was adopted by the council.

Portola's Guide, Suggested Title

The board of supervisors is to be commended for their action at the last meeting in appropriating a small sum to be used in clearing the ground and erecting a fence about the mammoth redwod tree near the Skyline boulevard, so that it may be seen by those passing on the picturesque drive. The Bear Gulch Water Company, or rather the state university, on whose lands the tree is located has given a similar sum and they, too, are to be commended for the public spirit shown.

The monarch of the forest has a circumference of 55 feet and a diameter of over 17 feet. The age of the giant is variously estimated at from 1300 to 2000 years. It is possible that it was a sappling when Our Lord was preaching in Galilee and was full fledged and came to maturity during the days of Constantine the Great and the Crusaders and was beginning to show signs of old age when Father Junipero Serra established the Santa Clara Mission.

It is still rugged giving evidence of many years of useful life.

The supervisors have asked the newspapermen and others to suggest a name for the giant redwood The name should in keeping with the early history and traditions of the county. It would e only fitting to suggest a name closely connected with some historic event or incident of this peninsula..

From early historians it is learned that Gaspar de Portola and his soldiers on their march up the coast through San Mateo county in 1769, when the beautiful bay of San Francisco was discovered, came directly east with his expedition over the mountains coming out in the vicinity of Crystal Springs Lake and camped not far distant from this big redwood. There is a story extant that Portola camped there over night and that in his march down the valley he took his bearing from the tree. It was his guide, his sentinel. The story also has it that it was near the big tree that he first beheld the beautiful bay lying peacefully to the east and the discovery of which was to make his name honored in every clime.

Father Crespi in his report of the expedition describes the locality as beautiful with many of live oaks and redwoods. Of deer were seen here and place, 50 were counted. Ly Indians came to visit pedition bringing presents date of the discovery is pl November 6, 1769.

Taking into consideratio circumstances surroundin historic event it would see "Portola's Guide" would be propriate name for the Redwood.
